Vice President

- The “kids4opensource” project in Germany went very well. 32 Kids created Joomla websites. One Joomler from Germany gave away a mini pc as a prize. Other prizes were hosted from hosteurope since they sponsored the hosting of the sites, 2 books of David and I, 2 hours personal Training. I talked already to Jonathan to be able move the kids sites to launch.joomla.org. The kids4opensource week involved 7 mentors and at least 6 hours per day for every mentor (some more) We also talked already to Laura and SD to share experiences so they can make use of it in the US series. The project gave us not only good insights on how to do such training but also “free user testing”. In such training situations it's very clear to see where Joomla has a UX deficit. We make a list and share with Production as well.
- Yesterday's proposed help by Jenn Gress in the main channel resulted in a small working group with the aim to improve documentation and testing of Release Candidate. The RC checklist was shared by Philip and next week there will be a meeting how to move forward.
- In the launch.joomla.org channel there is a discussion on how to improve launch.joomla.org conversions.
- Benjamin asked Elisa how to gain more sponsors for PBF End of year. Due to the COVID-19 situation, Elisa suggested some different ways to arrange the events, including the gamification.
- Elisa, following Wilco's question, suggested promoting Bugs & Fun @ Home also on the Community Portal, to get more traction.
- Before VP role, Elisa took a coaching with 5 coaches for 1.5 hours and talked with them if it's possible to partner with Joomla. Three of the coaches offer Joomla their expertise with Leadership and Communication Skills and are also willing to meet up with us from time to time for free and help us out with coaching. They are completely outside of the Joomla community and already brought some good first points to work on. They are still on the notes from our meeting or forget to send them to me
